To calculate Team B's probable score, we use the same formula, but replacing the average number of home goals with the average number of away goals. That looks like this:

Key among these is that Poisson distribution is a relatively basic predictive model, one that doesn't take into account the many factors that can affect the outcome of a game, be it football or hockey. Situational influences like club circumstances, transfers, and so on are simply not recognised, though the reality is that each of these can massively impact the real-world likelihood of a particular outcome. New managers, different players, morale... The list goes on, but none of these is accounted for within the remit of such a method.

FAQs

Events are independent: Each goal is independent of others. The occurrence of one goal doesn't affect the probability of another goal happening. For example, if a team scores a goal, it doesn't increase or decrease the chances of them scoring another goal.

Retail: In the retail sector, it can be used to model the number of customers entering a store in a given period of time, helping in staff scheduling and inventory management.
