Flamengo busca reforços para aliviar suas fileiras em como acertar nas apostas de futebol espera de convocações. O clube rubro-negro already confirmed three new players for 2024: Léo Ortiz, Viña, and De La Cruz. Moreover, Carlinhos, a striker from Nova Iguaçu, is also set to join the team but will only be officially presented after the final of the Campeonato Carioca.

Following a draw against Millonarios in their Libertadores debut, Flamengo's vice president of football, Marcos Braz, spoke to journalists from Colombia. He revealed the team's future transfer plans, stating that they always keep an eye on various players but have difficulty bringing in new talent due to the constraint of national team call-ups.

"Flamengo always monitors several players, in all positions. Everyone knows how difficult it is for Flamengo to bring in new players and lose them to national team duty. But I think we have good quality players in our squad, and we trust them," Braz said.

The team's strategy seems to focus on holding onto their current players instead of constantly bringing in new ones. Braz believes that adding player after player can lead to a lack of cohesion within the team.

"The players we have now are players we trust, and sometimes it's better to keep the same team rather than bringing in a lot of new players," he said.

Flamengo's next challenge is on Sunday, April 7th, against Nova Iguaçu, at 5 pm (Brasilia time) at Maracanã Stadium, for the return match of the Campeonato Carioca final.

Flamengo draws first blood against Millonarios in Libertadores <https://www.googleapis.com/plusone/href> A th October Stadium. The Rio de Janeiro team hosted a qualifying round match for the 2024 Copa Libertadores. Flamengo takes on other continental teams starting on April 7 to determine their group stage fate. The mighty Chileans from Universidad Católica and Atlas of Mexico City are the other rivals in Group E.

In their first test ahead of their Copa Libertadores debut, Flamengo played host to Deportivo Binacional, a visiting Peruvian squad, at Estádio October 12. On a dramatic night, the teams split the spoils after a pulsating 2h07min match, and it finished 2-2 at the final whistle. They play the finest national teams for the top continental competition in South American soccer. It can be tough for athletes because a lot of national teams recruit during the qualifying rounds. Group C kicks off with a debut on April 12, away against Atlas. On matchday two, they'll host Universidad Católica before hosting the Mexican side in round three. Millonarios, drawn in Group E, complete their first-round schedule with matches against Atlas followed by Universidad Católica.

After winning their first Libertadores match in exhilarating fashion, Millonarios aims to keep the pressure on Flamengo. Having made their South American debut, the Brazilians host their Colombian visitors looking to leave with the upper hand. Estádio do Maracanã in Rio de Janeiro is the scene of this second encounter in Group E on Tuesday, April 16 at 17:45 (04/16).

The Carioca Championship's return leg will take place a few days after the Millonarios' visit for the final. Everyone will be rooting for their side when Nova Iguaçu takes on Flamengo at Maracanã Stadium next Sunday. Considering they are drawn against each other in a high-stakes battle for the group stage, it's difficult to tell how these adversaries will match up when Millonarios and Flamengo meet inside the Monumental de Nuñez at the beginning of May. Of course, that will also depend on how things go for both clubs in the following weeks, but May 3 is the date set for those eager spectators' meeting.

Born in Peru, Flamengo fan Alex Neira recently came up with fascinating club-related content. Discover the historical places that serve as backdrops for each team featured in this week's Instagram stories about rivals to the death. Set up your own feud in South America! Which club would you decide on? @alexneira.com took charge of drawing up a list and coming up with a final verdict on each opponent possible for Group E's Millonarios and Flamengo. Would @Flamengo's journey come to an end at the Monumental de Nuñez? Or @Millonarios' hopes for the title will it end in Rio or Santiago? Because of the Libertadores draw format and schedule, supporters of both teams are on a roller coaster ride on many matchdays. Prepare your mind: On matchday 2, there will be on-field hostilities between these heavyweights of continental football; Millonarios and the Carioca giant drew 0-0 in their first Libertadores battle on April 3. This upcoming week will feature Matchday 3, and on May 3, there will be a rematch between the two. Because their next encounter is not until matchday four, which will take place on home soil Versus La Paz, things may have settled down and gone to Santiaguito by the time this highly anticipated rematch takes centre stage. Tite's side has made an effort to integrate Chileans into their lineup ahead of what will likely be a challenging qualification journey. Make sure to follow the journey of Flamengo-Millonarios. Take part in the conversation by liking, commenting, and sharing with Alex Neira. Every Friday, there will be a new instalment of South American Derbies on IN since they are vital to world football. Tune in next Friday to find out what other incredible matches will go down in history. Millonarios: League record; 5 W, 3D, and 3L. Previous results (2W 3D 2L), most recent results. Estádio do Maracanã, which can hold 7,4473 spectators, ended in a goalless tie, also known as a "no-score draw," on April 3 during the initial group stage showdown. Club Always Ready, the only Bolivian club, was Millonarios' opponent on April 10, losing 1-2. The top clubs from Chile, Atlas of Guadalajara, and the South American giants, Flamengo, will provide much competition for the Colombians. They cannot afford to lose additional points in order to be successful in this competition; when the going gets tough, it is essential for teams to avoid falling into long winless streaks, especially at home. If you can summon the willpower to play well in these situations, the last qualifying teams will qualify for the Libertadores. This year, 2024, will be the first to hold the tournament.

Third week in a row

Flamengo and Millonarios may play each other again. Despite not winning their qualifying games until the final encounter, in August of that year, they were just a match away from being classified in third place as runners-up. Last year's third-place finish, secured on home soil thanks to De Arrascaeta's header in the final minute of overtime, meant Colombia's Millonarios became the first alternate team to reach the Copa Libertadores knockout phase since Tolima finished first in Group E last year and eventually finished as runners-up in their maiden Libertadores voyage. This time around, Tolima will start in Group B along with Palmeiras B, Estudiantes, and Atletico Mineiro while Flamengo, already having earned itself an outlier during its journey to a maiden Copa Libertadores title in 2024 won by their alternate, takes on Universidad Católica, Atlas and Flamengo. This is looking ahead to Round 5. Four groups in the Copa Libertadores round-robin phase have been determined, with Thursday night's draw deciding the rivals that the four qualified teams will face in the coming weeks. Thursday evening's draw revealed new rivals for group stage leaders Palmeiras (Group B), Flamengo (Group E), Argentinos Juniors (Group F) and Racing Club (Group C). But they won't play rivals seeded higher or lower than themselves. The same draw applies to the eight participants announced last week as advancing to the knockout stages, such as defending champions Atlético Mineiro (Group A) and Cerro Porteno (Group D). But group runners-up Corinthians, Universidad Católica and Inter can continue to meet any of the other teams in the knockout stages. Here's a recap of what's at stake and who each of the team competing for the 2024 Copa Libertadores crown will face in the last 16 starting in May. Group A matches include Atlético Mineiro (seed 8) and Boca Juniors in what promises to be a high-thrills duel, while groups B, C, D, E, and F (Groups B, C, D, E, and F) present the formidable Palmeiras (seed 4) at home against Racing Club (seed 5) after coming from behind in the most thrilling match of the round; Racing Club's players were in tears for several minutes after the final whistle. With defending champions Atlético Mineiro topping Group A, it will host Guayaquil's club 9 de Octubre of Ecuador. Cerro Porteno face unseeded side Universidadex Cristal of Peru, ranked tenth overall, while Racing Club joined Palmeiras in Group Eighth on Matchday Four, seeding order for the round of 16 is established: All seeded teams receive a first round bye. Seed order was determined by last year's results so winners of groups containing teams that finished 7th or 8th play vs those teams ranked 5th or 6th. Because the runner's up matches could only happen in group stage.
