What Beats What in Poker?

Many consider poker less of a gambling game than other casino games. For that to be true, players need to improve their understanding of game play and the strategy required to be a winning player.

The first step toward learning how to play poker is to learn the poker hand rankings.

Most poker players have these rankings memorized, which allows them to think about other things at the table when deciding the best way to play their hands.

The good news is these hand rankings tend to be the same among a wide variety of poker variants, whether it is Texas Hold'em, Omaha, seven-card stud, or other games.

All of those games use the same traditional poker hand rankings that were first developed way back in the 19th century when five-card draw first started to be played.

On this page, you find a complete list of poker hand rankings going from the highest possible hand (the Royal Flush), down to the lowest hand in which there is no pair among the five cards.

Hand rankings in poker correspond to the likelihood of making such hands.

A royal flush, consisting of the cards ranked ace through ten all being the same suit, is extremely rare — in fact, some players go their entire lives without making a royal flush.

A regular straight flush with any five consecutive cards of the same suit is a little less rare, four of a kind occurs slightly more frequently, and so on.

Notice that a full house is ranked higher than a flush.

That's because a full house comes just a little less frequently than a flush, thereby making it the higher-ranked hand of the two.

Understanding Winning Poker Hands

Players new to the game of Texas hold'em often struggle, at least at first, with what the best poker hands are.

Once they have read this easy-to-digest guide that will no longer be the case.

The aim of Texas hold'em is to make the best five-card poker hand at showdown.

You can win without having to show your cards if you force someone to fold before the river.

Nonetheless, for the purpose of this article, we'll pretend that we've gone to showdown and need to know what beats what in poker.

Winning Poker Hands: What Are The Best Hands In Poker?

First up is the weakest possible holding you can make in poker, a hand that can still win you the pot, although the likelihood of that happening decreases in a pot involving multiple players.

We are of course talking about high card.

As the name suggests, you don't even hold a pair here and instead are using the highest card among the five you are playing.

Example: You have Q10 and the board has come 76295. Your best five-card hand would be Q10965 where you would hold queen-high.

Next up is one pair, one of the more common Texas hold'em hands and one that will win you plenty of pots.

Example: You have AK and the board comes A8532. Your five-card hand is AAK85 — you have a pair of aces. Nice poker hand!

One place higher up on the poker hands chart is two pair.

Example: You have 109 and the five community cards are 1095A3. Your best five-card hand at showdown is 101099A or two pair, tens and nines.

One note of warning on this specific poker hand: if you are verbally declaring your hand, try to announce the higher pair first as to help avoid confusion.

Good Poker Hands

Now we're getting into the realm of the best poker hands because once you make three-of-a-kind (sometimes called a set or trips), you are much more likely to win the pot than with any of the previously mentioned hands.

Example: Your five-card poker hand is KKKJ7 — you have three-of-a-kind kings, often a very powerful hand in hold'em.

To beat three-of-a-kind you're going to need at least a straight.

A straight is five consecutive cards where at least one of them is a different suit from the others.

Example:

Should your hand read 65432 you would hold a six-high straight.

If someone held a seven-high straight, then that player would win the hand.

There are two straights that have nicknames that are worth remembering.

A wheel is a straight that runs from ace-to-five, and a Broadway straight — the strongest straight — runs from ten-to-ace.

A flush is one of the most powerful Texas hold'em hands because it is only beaten by a handful of others.

Any hand that has five cards of the same suit is a flush.

Aces are always high when it comes to flushes, which means a hand such as AQ742 beats KQ742.

There are few hands that can beat a flush — one that does is a full house. Also called a "boat," a full house is when your five-card hand is made up of three of a kind plus a pair.

Example: With KKK22 you have kings full of deuces, while 555QQ is fives full of queens.

When it comes to full houses, the higher three of a kind determines which hand wins, so in this case "kings full" would beat "fives full."

The Stronger Hands in Poker

The next three holdings are so rare that if you hold them, you can almost guarantee that they are winning poker hands.

Four of a kind is the minimum holding you'll need to beat someone with a full house.

Again, as the name suggests, four of a kind means having four cards of the same rank.

Example: 101010107 is four-of-a-kind tens and an extremely powerful holding.

Your only way to beat four of a kind, or "quads" as they are often called, is to hold either a straight flush or a Royal Flush.

The former is five consecutive cards all of the same suit, so 87654 would be an eight-high straight flush and practically unbeatable.

If you manage to make AKQ10J (or the same holding in any of the other three suits), you have a Royal Flush and the only way to lose the hand would be to fold by accident!

Poker Hands Probability

If you are into numbers (most poker players are), you might be wondering about the probability of poker hands.

We said that some players might go their entire life without ever getting the highest hand in poker but, looking at the numbers, what are the odds of a Royal Flush?

In this section of our complete analysis of the poker hand ranking and what beats what in poker, you get a clear overview of the probability of poker hands.

How to calculate the probability of poker hands?

When you know that there are 52 cards in play and 2,598,960 possible combinations, the calculation is easy.

You just need to divide the number of possibilities to build a specific poker hand by the number of total poker hands.

Let's run a few examples:

What are the odds of a Royal Flush? 0.000,001,539
(4/2,598,960)

What are the odds of a Straight Flush? 0.000,015,39
(40/2,598,960)

Use the table below to calculate the probabilities of all poker hands.

Poker Hands Odds Table

As mentioned above, there are 2,598,960 possible combinations to make in poker. Below are the odds of making a poker hand in a game of five-card draw.

Poker Hand	No.	Ways	Probability	Odds against
Royal Flush	4	0.000154%	649,739 to 1
Straight Flush	40	0.00139%	72,192 to 1
Four-of-a-Kind	624	0.02401%	4,165 to 1
Full House	3,744	0.1441%	694 to 1
Flush	5,108	0.1965%	509 to 1
Straight	10,200	0.3925%	255 to 1
Three-of-a-Kind	54,912	2.1128%	46 to 1
Two Pair	123,552	4.7539%	20 to 1
One Pair	1,098,240	42.2569%	1.37 to 1
No pair / High card	1,302,540	50.1177%	roughly 1 to 1

Poker Hand Absolute Value vs. Relative Value of Poker Hands

It should be noted also that while poker hand rankings never change, sometimes circumstances can make a good hand less valuable and a poor hand more valuable.

In other words, when it comes to poker hands there's a difference between absolute value (reflected in the list of poker hands above) and relative value.

For instance, in a game of Texas hold'em, if you have two pair that might seem like a good hand. But if your opponent keeps betting into you and it's possible he could have a straight or flush, your two pair is no longer looking so good.

Meanwhile, if you have just one pair but your opponent keeps checking to give you a free play at the pot, you might well have the strongest hand and should bet your hand.

The "absolute" value of your hand may not be great, but in that case the "relative" value very well could be.

Also worth mentioning is the fact that in some games like razz, deuce-to-seven triple draw, Badugi, and others you might encounter when playing online poker, the hand rankings listed below do not apply.

These hand rankings are for regular or "high-card" games, not "lowball" games with alternate hand rankings.

Poker Hands - What Beats What in Poker FAQs

What is the order of poker hands? As shown in the poker hand rankings chart, the order of poker rankings (from the highest to the lowest) is: Royal Flush, Straight Flush, Four-of-a-Kind, Full House, Flush, Straight, Three-of-a-Kind, Two Pair, One Pair, High Card. What is the best hand in poker? The Royal Flush is the best hand in poker. To have a Royal Flush, you need an Ace, a King, a Queen, a Jack, and a 10. All the cards that compose the hand need to be of the same suit. What beats what in poker? As you can see in our poker hand rankings chart, the hands in poker follow a clear hierarchy. In a game of poker, the hand rankings work as follows: a pair beats a high card; a two pair beats a one pair; a three-of-a-kind beats a two pair; a straight beats a three-of-a-kind; a flush beats a straight; a full house beats a flush; a four-of-a-kind beats a full house; a straight flush beats a four-of-a-kind; a Royal Flush beats a straight flush. The Royal Flush is the best hand in poker, so no one other hands beat this one. What is a straight in poker? You have a straight when all the five cards that compose your poker hand are consecutive ones. E.g. 5-6-7-8-9.

If the cards are of the same suit, you have a straight flush, which is a considerably stronger hand compared to the simple straight. What beats a straight in poker? Although many see the straight as a stronger hand, there are many other poker hands that beat it. The list of hands that beat a straight includes: a flush; a full house; a four-of-a-kind; a straight flush; a Royal Flush. What beats a flush in poker? The list of hands that beat a flush includes: a full house; a four-of-a-kind; a straight flush; a Royal Flush. What beats a full house in poker? The list of hands that beat a full house includes: four-of-a-kind; a straight flush; a Royal Flush. What is the highest suit in poker? All the suits in poker have the same value. In some games, different suits can be assigned different values. When that happens, the value is as follows (from the lowest to the highest): clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades. In that case, spades is the highest suit. How many poker hands are there? The total number of poker hands in a game of poker is 2,598,960. Since a game of poker uses a 52-card deck of French cards, there are 2,598,960 different possible combinations (aka. poker hands). What hands to play in poker? The type of hands to play in a poker game depends on the game you play and other factors like your position in the hand, your stack, and the action at the table. In a famous poker strategy article, professional player Jonathan Little shared which hands to play in poker and how to play marginal hands. Can you make three pairs? Although it is possible to hold a pair in your hand and then have another two pair appear among the five community cards, you can only use a total of five cards to make your poker hand, so you don't win anything for three pairs. Which is better, a set or trips? They are both essentially the same hand because they are both three of a kind. The terminology "set" is used when you have a pair as your hole cards and then catch another one of those cards on the board. "Trips" is when there is a pair on the board and you have another of those cards as one of your hole cards. Sets are easier to disguise than trips so many consider them to be a better hand, although they both rank the same. What is a chopped or split pot? If you and an opponent have the same five-card poker hand, then the pot is divided equally between you. Say you have AJ and your opponent has AJ, and the board comes A82310. You both would be playing the same five-card hands in terms of their value (A-J-T-8-3), and so would split the pot. If there is four of a kind on the board, who wins? Because the aim is to make a five-card poker hand, whoever has the highest fifth card in this case wins. If the board reads 77773 and you have AQ in your hand and your opponent has KQ, then you win because your hand is 7-7-7-7-A and your opponent's is 7-7-7-7-K. You would also win even if your opponent's holding was KK in this example. Why did my 4-4-4-T-T lose to my opponent's 7-7-7-8-8? It is the three-of-a-kind element of a full house that dictates the winner.
