West Ham to beat Man Utd @ 29/20

West Ham are on a decent run of form with four wins and 7 a draw from their last six games leaving them just one place and one point below the visitors. Last weekend's 7 3-0 victory over Wolves was their biggest league win of the season and they look worthy favourites for a second 7 successive victory in this fixture, having beaten United 1-0 at the London Stadium in May. United have failed to score 7 in three successive games against Bournemouth, Bayern Munich and Liverpool so are worth opposing in our Premier League predictions.

Bournemouth to 7 win at Nottingham Forest @

29/20

Bournemouth have turned their season around after a slow start and it is their away 7 form which has been most impressive. Three straight wins on the road at Sheffield United, Crystal Palace and Manchester United 7 have lifted them to 14th and in Dominic Solanke they have one of the Premier League's in-form strikers. In contrast, 7 Forest have only managed one point from six games and Bournemouth can add to their misery.

Luton and Newcastle to draw 7 @ 31/10

No team in the Premier League has been as reliant on their home form as Newcastle, who are averaging 7 over two points per game more at St James' Park (2.67) than on their travels (0.63). The Magpies have only

7 managed one away win at rock-bottom Sheffield United and with their long list of injuries, they look too short at 7 62/100 for victory on Saturday. Luton are yet to lose by more than one goal at Kenilworth Road and drew 7 with Liverpool before being seconds away from holding Arsenal so a draw looks good value this weekend.

Fulham to beat

Burnley 7 @ 4/6

Burnley's defeat against Everton was the latest disappointment for a team which was so impressive when romping to the 7 Championship title last season. The only teams they have managed to beat since returning to the top flight are the 7 other two promoted clubs so they are easy to oppose as they head to Craven Cottage, where Fulham have won 7 three in a row and scored 13 goals in the process.

Tottenham to beat Everton @

4/5

That victory at Turf Moor 7 extended Everton's winning run to four matches and the 10-point deduction they received seems to have done wonders for their 7 motivational levels but we reckon that streak could end on Saturday. As impressive as recent results have been, this still 7 looks a limited Everton squad and they have lost without scoring in four of their five games against top-seven teams. 7 Having Richarlison fit again has given Spurs more of a goal threat and we're backing them for a third straight 7 win as the last of our Premier League predictions this weekend.
