Paedophiles urged to use Artificial Intelligence to create nude images of children

A Children's Charity is alerting about a manual found on the dark web that encourages pedophiles to use Artificial Intelligence to create nude images of children. This would be used to extort more extreme material from them, according to the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF). The manual teaches criminals to use tools to "nudeify" images, removing clothes from images of children's intimate clothes. The manipulated image could then be used against the children to force them to send more explicit content, according to IWF.

Aumento de Extorsão

A charity, which removes abusive images of children online, warned last year about an increase in cases of extortion involving children, in which the victims are tricked into sending explicit images of themselves and then threatened with disclosure of these images unless they pay. It was also reported that the first example of the use of Artificial Intelligence to create "astoundingly realistic" abusive content.

The anonymous author of the manual has a section dedicated to how to "successfully extort" girls aged 13 for sending nude images online. The IWF said the document was passed to the National Crime Agency in the UK.

Crescendo Preocupação

The IWF's 2024 annual report says it was the "most extreme year yet recorded", with more than 275,000 pages of abusive material involving children found online, the highest number yet recorded by the IWF. More than 62,000 cases of "category A" material were reported, which can include the most serious cases of abuse, including rape, sadism and bestiality.

The IWF found 2,401 images of self-generated sexual abuse material – in which the victims are manipulated or threatened into reporting abuse of themselves – involving children aged between three and six. Analysts said they saw abuse occurring in domestic scenarios, including bedrooms and kitchens.

Susie Hargreaves, IWF's executive director, said that opportunistic criminals who try to manipulate children "are not a distant threat". She said: "If children under six are being targeted, we need to have age-appropriate conversations now to ensure we can certify that we know how to recognize the risks."
