Politician in Guyana accused of sexual aggression for second time in less than a year

A powerful politician from Guyana has been accused of sexual aggression for the second time in less than a year, following his resignation last month over similar allegations.

The accuser, economist Sarah Aneesah Hakh, revealed in a press conference in Georgetown that the former minister Nigel Dharamlall sexually assaulted her in 2023 and 2024. Hakh affirmed that the first incident occurred during a business meeting when Dharamlall was acting as senior regional development minister of Guyana.

"The fact that I am still in that party is something that is difficult for me to understand", said Hakh.

Dharamlall, a Guyanese politician seen as influential in the country, was recently named to the executive committee of the Guyanese People's Progressive Party, which governs Guyana. He has been friendly with the president of Guyana, Irfaan Ali, and vice president Bharrat Jagdeo.

Dharamlall rejected the allegations in a statement published on his Facebook page, saying: "I emphatically and vehemently deny each of the allegations". He accused Hakh of being part of a "campaign to tarnish my reputation", claiming that "my behavior towards me changed fundamentally after she rejected my advances and rejected my attempts to get involved in an intimate relationship".

He has been in contact with Dharamlall to get comments and has communicated with the president's office in Guyana, Irfaan Ali.

Dharamlall resigned from the cabinet and parliament in Guyana last year after an indigenous adolescent accused him of sexual violation in an unrelated incident, which he has denied.

The girl later withdrew the complaint, according to officials, and no charges were filed, said President Ali in a video statement last month. However, some saw it as a sign of government corruption, as the public speculated that his family had been bribed.

In a statement from March, the group of women's rights activists Red Thread criticized the officials for not supporting the accuser.

"There is a great concern that the public nature of the complaint, the political status of the suspect, the devaluation of this case in an early stage and the speed with which this investigation ended, reinforce the perception of impunity and, inevitably, discourage other victims of sexual violence from coming forward", he wrote.
