Bayern Leverkusen player Jeremie Frimpong has sparked controversy with his celebration of the team's 4-0 win over Fortuna Dusseldorf in the German Cup semifinals. Frimpong, who scored the team's first goal, was seen simulating a marijuana joint and smoking it in a mock presentation alongside teammate Amine Adli.

This comes just two days after new legislation relaxing marijuana laws in Germany came into effect on April 1. The legislation allows for the possession of up to 25 grams of marijuana in public and 50 grams in private.

Frimpong and Adli's celebration did not go unnoticed, with many praising the duo's creativity. In fact, the celebration has gone viral, with many fans praising the players' boldness.

Meanwhile, in other news, ten people were killed in a brutal prison breakout in Campos dos Goytacazes, Rio de Janeiro. The bodies of six Corrections officers were recovered, while four inmates who escaped have been identified and are currently being sought by authorities.

The prison break occurred early morning when inmates overpowered a guard, seized his keys, and opened the cell doors. Authorities report that they used the prison's own resources to cut through cell bars, then broke windows and climbed down drainpipes to reach the ground.

Paraquat was also sprayed inside the prison to poison and kill those who pursued them. Many inmates were rounded up while trying to escape, while others were recaptured near the prison. A large police force, including police and military, has been deployed to track down the escapees. Police say a total of 15 inmates managed to escape, but one was arrested near a bus station after being recognized by an officer. Of the 14 who remain at large, one is a suspect in five homicides, and three more have records for intentional homicide.

The remaining ten inmates who escaped then fled through the Cândido Portinari neighborhood and are believed to have left the state. Governor Éderson Bezerra decreed three days of mourning in Mossoró, where the prison episode occurred.

Over 300 police officers have been mobilized to find the fugitives, and President Jair Bolsonaro has promised federal support for the operation. Authorities say a large cash reward is available for information leading to the capture of the escapees. Authorities warned that anyone found to be hiding or assisting the escapees will face criminal charges.

Rio de Janeiro State Secretary for Public Security, Ronaldo Fonseca, informed that in addition to the ten that escaped, 12 other prisoners had been recaptured. He said efforts will be made to strengthen security at the facility.

So far, authorities have yet to identify the four fugitives but guaranteed they are only dangerous to policemen. While the investigation into the escape is still ongoing, officials believe that some fugitives may still be hiding in Rio de Janeiro. So, in addition to the task force set up to track and recapture inmates, two aircraft are being made available to support operations.
