Thats 2nl to 10nl thinking. might be able to get away with that logic at 25nl if you are strong in other areas. But anyone who is getting calls with better hands and folds from worse hands is generally a loser in the small to mid stakes levels and up. Just remember, we play to win money, not pots. If you know someone is prone to float with overs, then your goal is to surmise whats the largest bet you can making that would make him call with bad odds. If hes floating with overs to 1/2 pot bets, he'll be a loser in the long run. When you make big pot bets with 9's then you are almost guiding him to play perfectly against you in that you'll only getting called from better hands and missing out on all the half pot calls you'd get from really bad floaters. And in this case, seeing as how you weren't the preflop raiser, there is a good enough chance that someone will actually have better. Your approach to the hand seemed to have been simple, i'll call and if my 9's look good after the flop, i will try to take it down. Common logic with bad players, and when i see someone play in this manner I usually take a note that he may be fishy. What your process should have been PF was is are my 9's the best, if it is do I want to raise and hope to get a call by a smaller pocket or overs. Or should i try to get value post flop. Since you elected to call, then your train of thought should be okay the flop is small, how do I get value. and shoving is definitely not any way of getting value by smaller hands. Don't be afraid to fold 9's to a short stack if you think they are tight enough to have a bigger hand because you don't have the set odds.
