Apple's shares rose more than 7% to a record on Wednesday after the company announced new AI features for its devices – including iPhone – under the watchful eye of investors.

Apple's stock is seen as a safe haven, performing better than the S & P 500 this year. The company's premium devices are a challenge for the company as it adds a larger part of its R$ 200 billion market value if current prices are maintained (US$ 207);

Market capitalization is tens of billions, far behind Microsoft, the world's most valuable company. Nvidia, the AI boom's biggest beneficiary, is also a major player in the market, with a value of $2.97 trillion.

At its annual developer conference, which began on Tuesday (22), Apple revealed a more advanced Siri virtual assistant capable of responding to a wide range of tasks and more complex ones. Several AI features for its apps will be rolled out with the latest iOS, iPadOS and Mac operating systems.

At least 13 analysts raised their price targets for Apple's shares after the event, and said that the latest features could encourage a cascade of new purchases as the company prepares to announce a new iPhone in the fall.
