Implante de Neuralink the owner of zebet ser humano sofre recuo inesperado

O primeiro esforço do Neuralink para implantar seu chip the owner of zebet um crânio humano encontrou um contratempo inesperado quando o dispositivo começou a se desprender do cérebro do paciente, revelou a empresa na quarta-feira.

O paciente, Noland Arbaugh, passou por uma cirurgia the owner of zebet fevereiro para fixar um chip Neuralink the owner of zebet seu cérebro, mas a funcionalidade do dispositivo começou a diminuir dentro do mês após o implante. Alguns dos fios do dispositivo, que ligam o computador miniaturizado ao cérebro, começaram a se retrair. A Neuralink não divulgou por que o dispositivo parcialmente se retraiu do cérebro de Arbaugh, mas afirmou the owner of zebet um post de blog que seus engenheiros aprimoraram o implante e restauraram a funcionalidade.

A diminuição das capacidades não pareceu ameaçar Arbaugh e ele ainda podia usar o implante para jogar um jogo de xadrez the owner of zebet um computador utilizando seus pensamentos, de acordo com o Wall Street Journal, que primeiro relatou o problema com o chip. A possibilidade de remover o implante foi considerada após a desconexão ser revelada, relatou o jornal.

Retração dos fios do dispositivo

O implante de Arbaugh começou a ter problemas no final de fevereiro, de acordo com o post de blog do Neuralink, quando um número não divulgado de fios do chip "se retraiu do cérebro, resultando the owner of zebet uma redução líquida no número de eletrodos eficazes". Isso diminuiu os bits por segundo do dispositivo, que é basicamente uma métrica de como bem o implante pode executar suas tarefas.

promoção do boletim irrelevante

O Neuralink, que é propriedade de Elon Musk e foi avaliado the owner of zebet cerca de R$5bn the owner of zebet último ano, tem amplamente divulgado o sucesso de seu primeiro implante, se posicionando como líder mundial the owner of zebet tecnologia de chip do cérebro. Embora o dispositivo ainda esteja nas primeiras etapas, a divulgação da empresa destaca mais a natureza inédita e complexa do procedimento experimental.

Os implantes do Neuralink funcionam incorporando um contêiner pequeno no crânio que abriga um chip de processamento e bateria, juntamente com 64 fios finos que se conectam com a tecido cerebral e interagem com os sinais neurais que ele envia. Arbaugh, que é tetraplégico, pode controlar dispositivos de computador, como um teclado ou cursor do mouse, com seu implante. Arbaugh elogiou o implante durante uma demonstração em março e disse que ele "já alterou a vida", enquanto também afirmou que não foi perfeito e eles "encontraram alguns problemas".

Antes do Neuralink realizar seu primeiro implante humano, ele experimentalou amplamente por anos em animais, incluindo ovelhas, porcos e macacos. Reguladores lançaram várias investigações sobre as práticas da empresa e seus laboratórios de teste em animais, no início deste ano, afirmando que eles encontraram problemas de controle de qualidade e manutenção de registros em um centro de pesquisa da Califórnia.
