Gang specializing in contraband cigarettes used similar rifles to kill seven victims and attempt to kill another, according to police investigation

Civil Police investigations revealed that the cigarette mafia's security team, which consists of security agents, used three 7.62mm rifles in eight crimes, resulting in the deaths of seven individuals and an attempt on the life of another. The victims are related to a power struggle over the illegal cigarette market in Rio de Janeiro.

Among the victims are Marco Antônio Figueiredo Martins, known as Marquinhos Catiri, Alexsandro José da Silva, known as Sandrinho, police officer João Joel de Araújo, Tiago Barbosa, police officer Bruno Kilier, Fernando Marcos Ferreira Ribeiro, Sergeant Diego dos Santos Santana, and Luiz Henrique de Souza Waddington, son of a bookmaker.

The police investigation traced the weapons used in the crimes to the mafia and discovered another clue: the mafia installed tracking devices in the cars of their victims to monitor their movements. The chips that enabled this tracking were purchased by Jeferson Rodrigues da Silva. The investigation found that an individual by the same name frequents Adilsinho's home, where he was seen visiting nine times in 2024.

Adilsinho, the suspected leader of the mafia, was personally interviewed by the police and identified Adilson Oliveira Coutinho Filho, known as Adilsinho, as the person responsible for the attempt on Waddington's life.

Two members of the mafia's security team are currently incarcerated, while Rafael Nascimento Dutra, known as Sem Alma, remains at large.

According to the authorities, the mafia used the same weapons in multiple crimes and employed tracking devices to monitor their victims. The police investigation is ongoing, and additional arrests are expected.
